1. Since he retired, John has been deprived of some favorite diversions — business meetings, business trips and cocktail parties. The humdrum routine of his present life is literally killing him.

① dramatic ② beating ③ monotonous

④ miserable ⑤ peaceful

2. To put audiences out of their pregame misery, many stadiums resort to canned versions of error-free performance of "The Star-Spangled Banner." But a taped version takes away the thrill of victory and the agony of defeat inherent in every live performance, as well as the singers' inalienable right to get it wrong.

① innate ② innovative ③ intimate

④ intricate ⑤ independent

3. Many US cities have abysmal on-time graduation rates, says a new report from America's Promise Alliance. What's worse, the news seems to surprise low-performing school districts, in part because many have been underestimating their dropout rates.

① typical ② increased ③ fluctuant

④ appalling ⑤ shallow

4. Jean Francois Champollion, a French philologist fluent in several languages, was able to decipher the first word 'Ptolemy' from the Rosetta stone. He painstakingly continued his search and was able to increase his growing list of known phonetic signs. He and an Englishman, Thomas Young, worked independently of each other to unravel the deeply hidden mysteries of this strange language.

① utilize ② unveil ③ level

④ differentiate ⑤ ramble

5. Police use of firearms is, quite rightly, the most closely monitored of all the 'tools' routinely carried by officers. After every fatal shooting, the officer who has fired the gun will face a stringent investigation to account for his or her actions.

① scientific ② persuasive ③ delicate

④ verbal ⑤ strict

6. Mark Smith, a Dallas attorney, says ① he'd ethically obligated to do ② what's best for his clients, “and that includes ③ saving them money.” So when one of them asks him to research a securities-fraud topic, for example, or breach of contract, he ④ doesn't even think about applying his $395 hourly rate. Instead, he calls Atlas Legal Research, an ⑤ outsourcing company based in Irving, Texas, that uses lawyers in India to provide the service for $60 per hour.

7. Certain experiences in the realm of art remain forever associated in our minds with the places ① where the art was first fully revealed to us. Subsequent experience may increase our knowledge, change our perspective, and ② deepen our understanding, but it can never quite eradicate the impression ③ made upon us by the quality of that initial encounter. Only for that moment something central to the spirit of the art ④ seemed to belong to the very atmosphere that enclosed it. Therefore, the art itself seems to us to carry the spirit of that atmosphere with it, no matter ⑤ what is the actual physical circumstance in which it is seen.

8. In the summer of 1989 when I was a fresh-faced constable on foot patrol, I was sent to an ① address after a report of burglary. When I arrived at the house I was met by a little old lady who quickly informed ② me of two masked men who had forced their way in, tied ③ her up laundered stockings hanging on a line in the kitchen and bundled ④ her into a cupboard while they ransacked her house. She was unhurt, but shaken. For me at the time it was certainly the biggest job I had ever been involved in ⑤ so I went at it with gusto.

9. Hamlet is perhaps the best-known character in all ① modern literature. Hundreds of ② thousands of pages have been written on him in every ③ living language. His personal complexity has made him a primary cultural figure. Just as we never tire of seeing Hamlet on stage or ④ talked about him, psychologists never tire of analyzing ⑤ the forces that make him who he is - in Laurence Olivier's words, "a man who could not make up his mind."

What does it mean? The plain man's answer would be, to know what is where by looking. In other words, it is the process of discovering from images what is present in the world, and where it is. It is therefore an information-processing task, but we cannot think of it just as a process. For if we are capable of knowing what is where in the world, our brains must be capable of representing this information.

① hearing ② vision ③ kinesics

④ tactility ⑤ feeling

Eyes often lighten with age and certain medical conditions cause color variations, but the most likely reason eyes change color is due to your surroundings. Eyes reflect their environment. Your eyes will appear darker if you're dressed in dark colors and are in a dimly lit room. Medications can also permanently darken the eyes. If just one eye changes color, it could put patients at risk of glaucoma.

① cynical ② appealing ③ informative

④ commanding ⑤ humorous

12. 다음 글에서 빈칸 (A)와 (B)에 들어갈 말로 가장 적절한 것끼리 짝지은 것은?

Everything said in academic texts tends to be cushioned in very cautious language. (A) , this is a necessary part of academic writing. The writers are trying to be as exact as they can in their analysis, so they are careful to say only what they think can be justified. In everyday life we cheerfully use language as a blunt instrument for cudgelling our way through the cut and thrust of events around us. (B) , in academic writing language is meant to be used more like a scalpel, cutting precisely between closely related arguments, so that they can be prized apart and analysed in detail.

	(A)		(B)
①	Nonetheless	-----	Therefore
②	Nonetheless	-----	For example
③	In fact	-----	However
④	In fact	-----	For example
⑤	Therefore	-----	However

13. 다음 글의 주제로 가장 적절한 것은?

When I was growing up my father used to count out loud to ten when he was angry with my sisters and me. It was a strategy he, and many other parents, used to cool down before deciding what to do next. I've improved this strategy by incorporating the use of the breath. All you have to do is this: When you feel yourself getting angry, take a long, deep inhalation, and as you do, say the number one to yourself. Then, relax your entire body as you breathe out. Repeat the same process with the number two, all the way through at least ten. The combination of counting and breathing is so relaxing that it's almost impossible to remain angry once you are finished.

① an effective way of controlling anger

② a useful strategy for handling children

③ a powerful exercise for practicing meditation

④ a quick method of reducing frustration

⑤ an easy technique for relaxing your body

14. 다음 글의 주장으로 가장 적절한 것은?

We cannot change the world, but to make the world a brighter place we don't need to. All we really have to do is focus on those little acts of kindness, things we can do right now. My favorite ways to be of service are to develop my own helping rituals and to practice random acts of kindness - almost always little things that give me enormous satisfaction and peace of mind. Often the most appreciated acts of kindness are not the million-dollar grants from giant corporations but the one hour of volunteer work in a home for the elderly or the five-dollar gift from someone who cannot afford anything at all.

① Do many great things with great love.

② Be grateful when you are feeling satisfied.

③ Change the world by changing yourself first.

④ Remember that you become what you practice most.

⑤ Focus on little things you can do when you want to help.

A series of high-profile cases involving the loss of computer discs by Government departments has left many police forces having to rethink the way they carry confidential information. The City of London force believes it has already solved the problem with a clever piece of software that makes the system more secure without making it more complicated. DeviceStick allows officers to download information onto a specially-designed USB stick, which can only be accessed with the correct fingerprint and password. The system also allows the force to track who is accessing computer systems, and when. Gary Brailsford-Hart, head of information management at the City of London Police, said "it would be virtually impossible for anyone to access the information," in the event of a device being lost.

① Technology Developed by Police Forces

② Technology Designed for Accessing Information

③ Technology Used in the Fight Against Crime

④ Technology for Protecting Confidential Information

⑤ Technology for Preventing the Loss of Computer Discs

16. 다음 글에서 전체의 흐름과 관계가 없는 것은?

We speak words with our voices, but a voice says more than what the words denote. ①The nonverbal part of the voice - its quality, pitch, rate, intensity, and inflection - is a language in itself, aiding in the interpretation of the words we utter. ②Nonverbal cues usually supplement and enhance verbal meanings, but, on occasion, words may say one thing and nonverbal voice cues something different. ③Sarcasm is a good example of inconsistency between word meaning and voice meaning. ④Voice production depends on a breath stream that activates the vocal folds. ⑤One may say, for instance, "I just love classical music," using a distasteful tone of voice that makes quite clear that one really means just the opposite of what the words alone convey.

17. I am a police officer in the reserve unit of a large department. Our monthly association newsletter is filled with positive stories about things officers have done, accomplished, and won awards for. Each of these stories should be marketed to the media in a press release. At the same time, police department needs to leverage their Websites as marketing tools. _____, the majority of police department Websites are static, have outdated photos and information, and are not managed to market the department. This leads the public to find information about the department from other sources.

① Luckily ② Intentionally ③ Ultimately

④ Eventually ⑤ Unfortunately

18. He had just squeezed in, touched the button for the correct floor, and was watching the doors slide shut when a suit-coated arm broke through and stopped them. Amid frowns and sighs from the half-dozen other people in the car - irritation was high on a hot day like this - Sheriff Roy strode into the _____ and gave them a quick once-over and smile, as if this were a meeting he'd convened. Then he nodded and turned to face front.

① automobile ② cable car ③ elevator

④ escalator ⑤ subway

19. Avian flu is now essentially uncontrollable. If it makes the small leap to a form that can infect humans, which every scientist thinks it's going to do, avian flu could spread very rapidly and put hundreds of millions of people at severe risk. That requires substantial preparations, first of all, developing vaccines and so on, but also having the infrastructure - hospitals, doctors, supplies - needed to deal with the _____.

① pandemic ② warning ③ syndrome

④ shock ⑤ turbulence

20. Meat is an appropriate food for humans - and for mold and bacteria as well. When it is fresh, it is one of the best _____ mediums. It consists of 20 percent protein, fats, mineral matter, and organic compounds. The rest of it is water. This combination of moisture and solids makes it one of the most perishable of foods. The bacteria produces discoloration and bad odors.

① harmless ② edible ③ culture

④ liquid ⑤ biological

21. Untold number of immigrants flooded into the job market to feed the needs of growing production lines. Today, the story is much different. Other countries have caught up with the United States in the race to manufacture goods. American cities have deteriorated into pools of ever-increasing poverty and crime. Industries have _____ the cities for the hinterlands, where costs are lower. Computerization and mechanization of production lines have lessened the need for trained workers.

① endured ② built ③ cleaned

④ deserted ⑤ destroyed

22. A great and wise philosopher, Tom Sawyer would now have understood that work consists of whatever a body is obliged to do, and that play consists of whatever a body is not obliged to do. And this would help him to understand why constructing artificial flowers or performing on a treadmill is work, while rolling tenpins or climbing Mont Blanc is only amusement. There are wealthy men in England who drive four-horse passenger coaches 20 or 30 miles on a daily line in the summer, because the privilege costs them considerable money; but if they were offered wages for the service, that would turn it into _____, and then they would resign.

① amusement ② work ③ predicament

④ dilemma ⑤ privilege

23. On one occasion I needed to open a bottle of wine but had no corkscrew. The purpose of my thinking seemed to be: how can I get the cork out of the bottle? I tried various approaches without success. Then I shifted the problem: how can I get the cork out of the neck of the bottle? This led on to attempts to push the cork down into the bottle. This also failed. At this point I went back to the overall definition of the purpose: how can I _____? So, using a screwdriver, I made a central hole in the cork and poured out the wine through the hole.

① replace a corkscrew to make a hole

② carve an image in the cork

③ make the wine bottle empty

④ get the wine out of the bottle

⑤ obtain the best quality of the wine

24. What is the first thing you say in the morning when you wake up? I can remember when I used to awaken in the morning and say with a groan, "_____" And that is exactly the sort of day I would have, one thing after another going wrong. Now when I awaken and before I even open my eyes, I thank the bed for a good night's sleep.

① Oh god, another day. ② Let's call it a day.

③ What a wonderful day! ④ Alright, make my day.

⑤ It's been a long day.

25. While looking for smugglers on Key Biscayne one night, I identified myself and asked a male passenger in a car that was stopped near a boat ramp if there were any firearms in their vehicle. The passenger said nothing as he leaned forward very quickly, enough to startle me, and opened the glove compartment of the car. All hell broke lose. I raised my service pistol with my right hand and yelled something like, "US Customs! Don't move! Don't move!" Fortunately, the young man froze just as he started to reach inside the glove compartment. I reached in and recovered a revolver from the glove compartment. Once I cleared the couple of any wrongdoing, my partner and I left the area after learning a very important lesson. Not everybody who owns a gun is a dirtbag. Some law abiding people simply don't realize _____.

① that they are violating the state law.

② that their actions can appear threatening to the police.

③ that their guns may be illegally smuggled.

④ that they cannot park the car anywhere they want.

⑤ that many police officers are faster than them.

The nature-nurture controversy has existed for many years. Basically, it involves the extent to which behavior and mind are influenced by innate factors and learned environmental factors. Innate refers to nature and learned environmental factors refer to nurture. It should be clear by now that nearly every aspect of the mind and behavior is influenced by the interaction of nature and nurture rather than either acting alone. Even biologists who study lower animals agree that it is virtually impossible to tease apart the effects of an animal's genes and the effects of the environment.

① No genes, no organism

② No environment, no organism

③ No environment, no genes

④ No interaction between genes and environment

⑤ No genes, no organism; no environment, no organism

One of my friends had to visit the ladies' lavatory but, upon entering a cubicle, found a rather disgusting toilet that hadn't been flushed. "Yuck!" she said, backed out hastily and used another cubicle. Another lady came in while my friend was washing her hands. She entered the cubicle with the unpleasant toilet and also retreated rapidly. My friend smiled. "I did that!" she trilled. It wasn't until much later that she realized why the woman gave her a withering look.

30. 다음 글에서 경찰관이 밑줄 친 "But I can't figure out where."라고 말한 가장 적절한 이유는?

Saving for a new car on a teacher's salary takes a while. So in the meantime, a mechanic friend loaned me an old junker so beat up that even its dents had dents. I came out of school one day to find a police officer and a woman examining it. "What's going on?" I asked. "I saw her hit your car," the cop explained. "But I can't figure out where."

① Because the woman didn't tell him where.

② Because there were already too many dents.

③ Because the damage was not serious.

④ Because there was no witness around.

⑤ Because the policeman knew the teacher.

32. Needless to say, any estimate of a modern novel is (A) valueless / priceless unless it is based on knowledge of the great work of the past; but at the same time our estimates of the great work of the past are always being (B) altered / sheltered , however slightly, in the light of the novels of the present. For, in fact, all literary work, both of the past and of today, exists as it were in an (C) internal / eternal present. We speak of the tradition of the novel, but tradition is not a dead thing, the classics, not so many books behind the glass of the Victorian book-case. Tradition is a living force, which changes as it takes in more and more work of the present.

(A) (B) (C)

① valueless --- altered --- internal

② priceless --- altered --- eternal

③ valueless --- sheltered --- internal

④ priceless --- sheltered --- internal

⑤ valueless --- altered --- eternal

33. Maps have to make sense of our world, a sense of place, of belonging. They give us the (A) ability / capacity to point to a place on a map, and say, "This is my homeland. This is where I've traveled, and this is where I still want to go." The problem for map-makers is not that the earth changes, but that borders shift and empires (B) arise / rise and fall. In the 1990s alone, the Soviet Union disappeared, Germany was reunited, Yugoslavia disintegrated, and Hong Kong was handed back to China, faster than publishers of atlases could (C) bring / take out new editions.

(A)

I had to get up at 4:30 a.m. to drive into Los Angeles to catch a plane to Toronto. So I set the alarm clock on the table beside my bed in the hotel, to go off at 4:30 a.m. At 4:30 a.m. I was awoken and set about switching off the alarm so that all my neighbours would not also be awoken at an hour which might not have suited them. I tried everything, including disconnecting the electricity supply. Nothing had any effect. The sound continued. I was just about to drown the clock in a basin of water when I suddenly noticed that the sound was coming from my travel clock which I had set and then forgotten all about.

Experimentation with drugs for many kids begins around age 11 or 12, just as brain development is kicking into its highest gear since infancy. Drug use during this time may permanently change the brain — particularly the high-level reasoning and decision-making centers. All told, more than half of teens will try an illicit substance at least once, and almost will try alcohol, tobacco, or both. What can parents do to keep their kids safely off the path to abuse or addiction?

① Tips for parents on how to safeguard the kids

② How kids keep their parents from being alcoholic

③ Where to go to get some information about drug abuse

④ Protective measures for kids to take to avoid drug addiction

⑤ The advantages of certain activities like martial arts and music lesson

It is hard to build precise boundaries around periods in art history. But in the case of Cubism it is possible to say that the movement was ushered in by the Demoiselles d'Avignon conceived by Picasso towards the end of 1906 and abandoned in its present state during the course of the succeeding year. It is a disturbing and daring painting today. Sixty years ago, it must have seemed nothing short of incredible. It certainly dismayed and baffled even Picasso's warmest supporters. Braque, an intelligent and open-minded young painter, was frankly horrified when he first saw it. Yet some months later his great Female Bathers was to demonstrate that the Demoiselles d'Avignon had altered the entire course of his artistic evolution.

Japan may be the world's second largest economy with a reputation for technological prowess, but its schools aren't making the grade. Critics say student bodies are stultifyingly homogeneous, teaching methods are obsolete, and there's a dearth of courses taught in English, the lingua franca of international education and commerce. “Japan's schools are third-rate by international standards," says Robert Dujarric, director of Temple University's Institute of Contemporary Japanese Studies. In the 2007 Times Higher Education Supplement, an influential UK-based annual survey of universities all over the world, only four Japanese universities ranked in the top 100, compared with 37 from the US and 19 from the UK.

① Japanese schools reflect the economic status of Japan in the world.

② In Japan, foreign students are too few.

③ Japanese teachers don't innovate their teaching methods.

④ In Japan not many courses are lectured in English.

⑤ Not many Japanese universities are top-ranked by international standards.

The American family has also gone through many changes in the past fifty years. Primary among these changes is the current attitude about divorce, the legal end of a marriage. Until the 1960s, divorce was quite uncommon. However, in the next twenty years, there is one divorce for every two marriages. With less emphasis on tradition, on religion, and on the economic dependence of women on men, Americans seem less likely to remain in a marriage that has problems. They are not forced by economic, social, or religious pressure to stay married. Partly as a reaction to the high divorce rate, many Americans live together without being married.

① Americans' attitude toward divorce never changed.

② The current American society discourages divorce.

③ In the 1980s, the divorce rate in the US reached about 20%.

④ Nothing seems to prevent the divorce rate from increasing in the US.

⑤ Not a few American women prefer to stay married due to financial reasons.

Joe couldn't take much time of his blind date. Luckily, he had arranged for a friend to ring the restaurant at nine with an excuse for him to leave. Sure enough, he was called to the phone on the hour and returned to tell his date, "I've got to go. My father's died.“

"Thank heavens for that," the date replied. "If yours hadn't, mine would have had to."

① Joe's father died unexpectedly.

② The woman's father died all of a sudden.

③ Joe and the woman have the same father.

④ Joe's friend is also the woman's friend.

⑤ The woman didn't like Joe either.

The street is throbbing with throngs of workers in shabby clothes. People begin to walk quicker and quicker, their faces down, their brows furrowed. A taxi honks, then a bus, then a policeman blows his whistle and shouts to the crowds dashing across the street. In the distance church bells toll, and in the trees the wind is whistling. Beneath their feet, the rumble of the subway can be heard while its steam rises from the grill in the sidewalk to meet the cold air on the street. All the scenery in the street looks like a wedding without a bride.

One-fifth of the US corn crop is diverted to more than 100 ethanol refineries. The increased demand boosts the price of corn to record levels. Eager to cash in, many US soybean growers switch to planting corn, which is pricier. Soybean prices rise as supplies shrink. To meet global demand for soybeans, farmers in Brazil are expanding into fields previously used as cattle pasturelands. Displaced ranchers, in turn, clear new grazing lands in the Amazon rain forest or the Cerrado savanna, releasing carbon.

Exhausted after driving all night, a taxi driver decided to pull over to get some sleep. He had just settled back to snooze when there was a knock on the window. He opened his eyes to a jogger, who asked, "Excuse me, but do you have the time?" "It's 8:10." "Thanks," he replied, running off. The man had just dozed off again when there was another knock. "What time is it?" asked a hiker. "8:25." Fed up, the man put a sign in his window that read "I DON'T KNOW WHAT TIME IT IS!" Knock, knock! He was suddenly awakened again. Scowling, the man rolled down the window. "What?" he yelled at the boy standing there. "It's 8:45," said the boy.

① Because the boy was asked to.

② Because the driver slept too long.

③ Because the boy wanted to tell the driver the time.

④ Because the boy wanted to ask the time.

⑤ Because the car was not allowed to park there.

There are two types of panhandling: passive and aggressive. Passive panhandling is a silent solicitation; the panhandler generally lets his appearance speak for itself. Aggressive panhandling involves some type of verbal interaction usually accompanied by a physical action. The physical action can be approaching a pedestrian or knocking on a car window. Aggressive panhandling may include some type of menacing action with a direct or implied threat. Passive panhandling plays on a citizen's sense of generosity, whereas aggressive panhandling plays more on a citizen's sense of fear.

It was remarkable that there was so much hoopla over whether this one visit by the New York Philharmonic could somehow have a lasting effect on relations between North Korea and the civilized world. This flies in the face of the Bard's admonition to remember that what's past is prologue. Not quite four decades ago, the US table-tennis team ping-ponged to Beijing, opening the door for Nixon to play the "China card" against the Soviets, but that only led to nearly two decades of détente. The only effective way to bring about the end of totalitarian regimes is direct confrontation. The USSR fell because world leaders like Ronald Reagan, Margaret Thatcher and Pope John Paul II confronted that state and its ideology head-on.

I was recently searching a school that had been broken into. I had my trusty general purpose dog with me, called Louis. We had received reports that the intruders were still inside the school, so I sent the dog in first to try and locate (a) them. He had picked up the scent and as I approached the communal toilet block, he started to bark, telling me there was someone inside. As I entered the room there was a line of about twelve toilet cubicles along the wall. (b) They were all standing with the doors wide open - apart from two which were closed. I shouted that anyone inside the toilet cubicle should come out immediately. No response. Again I called for the suspects to come out and face me. Again nothing. And as I looked under the doors of the cubicles I could see a pair of feet in each one - clearly (c) they were sitting on the toilets. ‘Not the smartest cookies in the box,’ I thought. Well, I had given (d) them the chance and they refused to open the door, so I sent Louis in who pulled them both out. (e) They will not be breaking into anywhere else for a while.

Person (A)

For society to function we must maintain strong sense of individual moral responsibility. We cannot allow people to absolve themselves of moral responsibility on the grounds of 'medical', 'psychological' or 'social' dysfunction. A culture of rehabilitation denies individual responsibility and thus erodes the moral fabric of society. Prison sentences, enforced strictly, reinforce the crucial notion of individual responsibility for actions.

Person (B)

If we really want to reduce crime and live in a safer society we need to understand criminals as well as having our retribution against them for the wrongs they have done. A criminal who is put in prison cannot offend for that period of time, but when he comes out he will be the same person - or worse - and will simply go straight back to a life of crime. _____ must go together with deterrence, retribution and prevention as an integral primary concern of the justice system.
